

2021 in Review

Year of Trials and Progress!

We continue to adapt our initiatives to the global COVID-19 pandemic. After moving our operational activities mostly online in the first half of the year, we slowly opened up to more physical presence towards the second half of the year. We continue to develop new initiatives and expanding our network and outreach, testing our organization's ability to adapt, and inspire innovation.

Accomplishments

Our Research and Initiatives continue to empower climate action despite pandemic limitations:

Online: Game Day was launched online at the Climate Adaptation Week Groningen in January 2021. Participants can join our activities from anywhere in the world!

In-person Game Days were successfully organized in a safe and friendly environment with organizations including Waddenfonds, Leiden University and Lund University.

Available in Spanish: Game Day is now available in Spanish connecting with groups in Chile and Mexico.

COP26: Minions of Disruptions were present at the Water Pavilion at COP26 both online and in Glasgow.

Dirt Day: A new initiative developed to promote permaculture at community level. First activity was successfully hosted in Amsterdam in October.

Knowledge sharing: Initiated research activities to analyze and share results with broader community practitioners.

Marketing effort extending from increased LinkedIn presence to podcast interviews with Can't Take the Heat from Red Cross Red Crescent Climate Centre and Kritische Denken based in Belgium.

Networking partnership started to develop with Simavi to adapt the board game to the Kenyan context. The project idea is nominated and selected as one of the Partos Award finalists.

Day of Adaptation maintained an active core group of volunteers and even recruited our first intern to amp up our research and innovation efforts.

New board leadership: Sharon Smit joined as the Chairperson and Perle Laouenan-Catchpole as Secretary.

Thoughts from our participants

"In a light-hearted way, it helps start the conversation about the range of difficult issues any organisation or community needs to work on right now." — Jem Bendell, Professor of sustainability leadership at University of Cumbria, UK

"I really felt that we were together in the same fight, albeit on different sides of the Atlantic. That feeling of community really helps me to bear the stress and the anxiety that I feel when studying climate change." - Juan Pablo Toledo Hormazabal, climate activist based in Chile

Reflections from team members!

"It's awesome to be working in a team that is communicative, interested, and supportive – it's allowed the process to be wholly collaborative from the start." - Julia Eichhorn

"That experience opened for me a door through a voluntary effort where a group of high engage climate activists are making a difference in the acknowledgement of climate change from an optimistic perspective." - Carlos Alonso
